RUSSIANS EVACUATE TWO TOWNS

GERMANS CLAIM FOOTING IN TANK CITY

BATTLES of unparalleled fury are swaying over the narrow "Valley of Death," outside Voronezh, and in the streets of the city itself, which is slowly yielding to overwhelming weight of metal. "The fate of the city is sealed," says "The Times" Correspondent, and Russian sources indicate how precarious is Marshal Timoshenko's hold on his last direct link with Moscow. Berlin claims that since July 1st 118,000 prisoners have been taken in this area.

Marshal von Bock's attack in the Boguchar area has cut the Moscow-Rostov railway line at Kantemirovka, and Moscow announced last night that both Boguchar and Millerovo, 60 miles further south, had been evacuated. Reports reaching Stockholm say that the Axis troops have gained a foothold in the streets of the locomotive town of Voroshilovgrad, 100 miles north-west of Rostov. The threat to Rostov is heightened by a reported break-through along the Azov shore to Rovenki, a point which offers itself as the nearest jumping-off ground across the north-eastern narrows of the Azov Sea to the Caucasian mainland, just below Rostov. Nothing from Moscow confirms these claims, nor the repeated Berlin assertion that advance elements are now only six miles from Rostov City. In counter-attacks on the Kalinin front, Moscow states, 5,000 Germans were killed.—(Reuter.)

DOUBLE DRIVE FOR ROSTOV

Reuter's Correspondent in Moscow writes: "Wednesday.—The battle for Voronezh has reached a new peak of ferocity, with Panzer spearheads driving wedges into the outskirts of the city, tommy gunners infiltrating into outlying districts, and paratroops attempting to establish small strong points. The defence, daily faced with more enemy tank and infantry divisions from the Don's west bank, is fighting with savage determination. Yesterday the Red Army men successfully dealt with two attempts to outflank and encircle the city, and tactical positions outside the city were regained. There was a wholesale massacre of Germans when, under cover of night, they moved fresh units across the river. Russian artillery and mortar fire exacted a terrible toll.

"But the fact remains that the last four days have seen a considerable increase in the numbers reaching the east bank. On the west bank the Germans have now organised crossings north and south, as well as opposite Voronezh. The German Command is trying to 'steam-roller' Voronezh. In the narrow valley of death, between the Don and Voronezh Rivers, thousands of dead Germans lie among hundreds of tanks, twisted to scrap iron. Two or three German divisions have been badly mauled, and are now in urgent need of reinforcements. General Schuelper's third motorised division crossed the Don on Monday night, and 24 hours after its meagre remnants had to be withdrawn. The 168th Division, which replaced it, has already suffered heavy losses."

"FATE SETTLED"

"The latest information indicates that the fate of Voronezh is settled for the present to the German advantage," says The Times Stockholm Correspondent. "Whether it is already occupied is uncertain, but daybreak found the Germans holding a large part of the city, with fierce house-to-house fighting continuing."—(Copyright, per Press Association.)

A Tass message from Moscow said that the intensity of the great battle on the banks of the Don, and particularly in the Voronezh area, was increasing every hour. New aircraft and infantry formations and artillery were being thrown in by both the Russians and Germans. Despite immense losses, however, the Germans were pushing forward. At one point last night they hurled fresh forces over the Don, and at dawn today renewed the attack. In one unnamed sector the Germans compelled Russian troops to fall back and broke into a city district.—(The A.P.)

German radio to-night claimed that 118,689 Russian prisoners had been taken in the battle of Voronezh since July 1.

MOSCOW, Wednesday.—In the past three days local battles have been fought in various sectors of the Volkhov front, a Red Star despatch stated to-night. "The Russians improved their positions and routed the garrison of a strongly fortified centre of resistance. German counter-attacks failed."

Finnish Radio said to-day that the Russians were using a new incendiary bomb—small phosphorus balls, dropped from low-flying aircraft. These bombs had set a whole forest on fire, the Radio said.—(Associated Press.)

"SAFETY MARGIN" NEAR

MOSCOW, Wednesday.—The margin of territory that can safely be lost now without gravely prejudicing the outcome of the war is very narrow. It would be dangerous to over-estimate the power of Soviet resistance, military, economic and political. It should be realised with all its implications that only the grimmest determination to mobilise all available Allied forces, and to engage them as quickly as possible, can retrieve a grave situation.—(Times telegram, per Press Association.)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, Wednesday.—The Soviet midnight communiqué says:—"During July 15 our troops continued to fight fierce engagements with the enemy in the area of Voronezh.

"After heavy fighting our troops have evacuated Boguchar and Millerovo. No material changes took place on the other sectors of the front.

"During July 14 Soviet air formations on various sectors destroyed or damaged over 90 German tanks and 160 lorries with infantry and supplies. They silenced seven A.-A. batteries, and dispersed and partly annihilated about two battalions of infantry."

"During combined operations of our Stormovik pilots and one tank unit, in one day over 1,000 German officers and men were killed. Nineteen tanks, 23 guns, 36 lorries, 71 heavy machine-guns, and several armed lorries transporting infantry, were destroyed."

BRITISH SHIP TORPEDOED

WASHINGTON, Thursday.—A large British merchant vessel has been torpedoed approximately 1,500 miles off the Atlantic coast, the U.S. Navy Department announced to-night. Survivors have been landed at an east coast port.—(Reuter.)

TANKER SUNK

"A heavily-escorted enemy tanker has been destroyed off the French coast by our light coastal forces," states a British Admiralty communiqué.

NEW AXIS ATTACK REPELLED

ALLIES HOLDING THE INITIATIVE

MARSHAL ROMMEL, in his third successive attempt to recapture Tel el Eisa on Tuesday night, succeeded in gaining some small isolated positions, but was forced to retire to his lines, with considerable losses.

General Auchinleck's G.H.Q. in Cairo announced yesterday that Allied light bombers, fighter bombers and fighters on Tuesday maintained their large-scale attacks. Direct hits were scored on tanks and troop-carrying vehicles. In one attack all but one of a convoy of 15 armoured cars, transport vehicles and a tank were destroyed. Other tanks were wrecked in further raids, while during the day at least four Axis aircraft were shot down by fighters.

The Times special correspondent in the Western Desert, quoted by Reuter, writes: "It is virtually impossible to carry on serious operations at night time. The most that can be hoped for is a limited cumbersome advance and the seizing of small isolated positions. This was what apparently happened last night, but at the first light to-day our counter-attack successfully threw out the enemy, who was forced to retire to his lines, having suffered considerable losses. There is a certain attrition of the enemy forces going on at present that cannot but have important results. While our armoured forces, except for small units forming part of our strong columns, are not operating, the enemy is using his tanks daily at considerable cost in these continuous and fruitless attacks round Tel el Eisa."

GERMAN VIEW

BERLIN, Wednesday—By launching counter-attacks, the British are trying in vain to prevent German troops from breaking through before the El Alamein position, says Berlin military circles, quoted by the German News Agency. All attacks were repulsed with heavy casualties.

Admiral Leutzow, German naval spokesman, broadcast to-night:—"Our naval aim is to conquer British sea power in the Mediterranean. This can only be achieved with the help of land operations."—(Reuter.)

BOMBING ATTACKS

CAIRO, Wednesday.—In the central sector of the El Alamein front Allied forces initiated active operations last Tuesday night. Fighting continued during to-day (Wednesday). In a limited offensive the Allied forces have been substantially successful, and taken an appreciable number of prisoners. In the Northern sector of the front Australian troops have held off all attacks, and maintained their positions.—(Reuter.)

In the Southern sector there is no activity of any importance to record. Fighter bombers and light bombers attacked Marshal Rommel's tanks and armoured vehicles to-day on the same big scale as yesterday. There was another large-scale and successful attack on Tobruk last night.—(Reuter.)

PEACEABLE LOCAL ELECTIONS

SENATE'S DESIRE

THE local Government elections probably will be held on August 19th next.

This was announced by Mr. S. MacEntee, Minister for Local Government, in the Senate yesterday, when the second stage of the Local Government (Amendment) Bill was taken.

The question of whether, in view of a recent statement by the Government party organisation, the contests would be fought on political lines, was raised by Mr. BAXTER, who contrasted the organisation statement of the party with the Minister's previous expression in favour of non-political elections aimed at securing representatives of the best possible character.

Mr. J. G. DOUGLAS suggested that if the elections were fought on the same lines as the Parliamentary elections it would be a tragedy.

The MINISTER said that he hoped it would be possible for all parties to make an appeal to the electors to conduct the elections calmly. He did not, he said, see how any acute political issues were going to arise, and people would pay more regard to the character and personal qualifications of candidates than to the political ticket. The Executive of the organisation to which he belonged had decided to leave the branches free to put forward a proper type of candidate if they wished. He had not said in the Dail that the different political groups or parties were not to participate, because it would be contrary to the Constitution and the liberty of the individual to suggest that.

The Committee stage of the bill will be taken next week.

SENATE ELECTIONS

When a motion by Mr. J. J. COUNIHAN — which was eventually withdrawn—seeking to establish a committee of nine members of the House to consider the method of election of the 43 panel members of the Senate, Mr. Counihan contended that at present the Senate was no more than a replica of the Dail. He favoured the setting up of a Selection Board to examine the qualifications of candidates.

He was joined in his view by Mr. J. G. Douglas and Mr. M. Hayes, the former observing that while he did not consider the existing Senate the worst or the best possible type of House, no one could pretend that they had achieved a vocational Senate. Mr. Hayes expressed the view that it was not vocational at all, in spite of elaborate machinery for election on vocational lines.

On the other side, Mr. McEllin declared that the House had done remarkably well, and Mr. Lynch voiced the feeling of the House when he suggested that nothing should be done until the report of the Vocational Organisation Commission would be available.

Winding up, Mr. Counihan said that something was required to enable the members to be independent and not subservient to the wishes of the Government.

The Senate adjourned till Wednesday next.

NORTHERN CENSURE MOTION REJECTED

THE motion of censure on Sir Dawson Bates, Minister for Home Affairs, was rejected, in the Northern Ireland House of Commons yesterday, by 22 votes to four.

The motion, which was moved by Mr. Nixon (Independent U.), and seconded by Mr. Midgley (Lab.), was that the conduct of the Minister was deserving of censure for his action, as solicitor in the firm of E. and R. D. Bates, in matters which would come before him for his decision in his capacity as Minister, and also for his handling of the charges of attempted bribery and corruption in connection with the suggested purchase, by the Belfast Corporation, of the Rathmore site for a sanatorium, and the charges of corruption and maladministration in connection with the contract for extension of Armagh City Hall.

MINISTER'S REPLY

Sir Dawson Bates, in his reply, said that the attack made on him had not caused him any surprise. It was the culmination of twenty years of implacable hostility to himself. Mr. Nixon had blamed the late Prime Minister (Lord Craigavon) for his dismissal from the police force, and had had the audacity to say that he (Sir Dawson) had nothing to do with it. "I wish to make it clear," said the Minister, "that I was responsible for his dismissal. I have never carried out any executive duty of the propriety of which I felt a stronger conviction to-day than this. The passage of years has only fortified that conviction."

Sir Dawson said that he conceived it his duty as a Minister to see that private interests should never be allowed to conflict with public duty. It was elementary for one of the solicitors' profession that he could not act for two clients at the same time where their interests conflicted. "Neither in my public capacity nor in acting for private clients have I ever transgressed this rule," he said.

He assured the House that, during his twenty-one years in office he had never attempted to influence any of those who held the office of Attorney-General, nor did the Cabinet, acting together, do so.

Sir Dawson then went on to deny in detail the charges alleged against him. As Minister of Home Affairs he had visited the Rathmore site, and, without the advice of his technical officers, he was satisfied that it was entirely unsuitable for a sanatorium. Never at any time before this inspection, during it, or after it, did Mr. McCrudden mention the subject of Rathmore to him.

The handling of bribery charges was not his function—it was the Attorney-General's. "Three successive Attorney-Generals," he said, "have received very little assistance from those who, by their public speeches, have shown that they could, if they would, have thrown a flood of light on this disreputable and flagrantly criminal transaction." He never expected to have to defend his personal honour in that House or anywhere else, and it was a difficult and distasteful task.

The Prime Minister (Mr. Andrews) appealed that the motion should be withdrawn. After investigating this matter very fully and carefully he could say, without hesitation or qualification, that Sir Dawson Bates had been most careful and scrupulous to make sure that no conflicting interests would ever arise between his firm and his public duty. That must be admitted by any person whose mind was not poisoned by political bias or desire to wound.

"Sir Dawson Bates," he said, "enjoys my implicit confidence, as he did that of the late Lord Craigavon and Lord Carson. This House is not to be made a mud-throwing establishment. It is the duty of every one of us to uphold its dignity and honour."

Mr. Andrews said that Sir Dawson Bates acted in a proper manner in laying before the Attorney-General the allegations of corruption, and leaving it for him to decide.

The Attorney-General, Mr. MacDermott, said that he could find nothing to suggest that the Minister had ever done anything to curtail the inquiry into charges which arose out of the Rathmore site. As far as the Armagh contract was concerned, the only evidence of incitement to bribery was the statement of one man—a Mr. Hogg—and that was not sufficient to put anyone's liberty in peril.

INDIAN ATTITUDE TO BRITAIN

The Press Association Lobby Correspondent states:—"Developments in India are causing the British Government some apprehension. Mr. Gandhi is thought in some unofficial quarters to feel that it would be better to get the British out even if it meant the Japanese coming in, because he considers that the Japanese would be less tenacious in their hold on his country. Eventually, discouraged by non-co-operation, the Japanese would — as Gandhi sees it—gradually relax their hold until India was left to its own devices.

"With this very dubious-sounding objective, Gandhi will now probably ask us to withdraw, and may try to expedite this by a passive resistance compaign, in which Indians will be encouraged to refuse to pay their taxes, to decline co-operation either for the defence of their country or anything else, and to refuse to give up such things as small ships to the Government without immediate compensation. A rather sinister aspect is that some Congresmen — thinking that the Japanese may win the war, and so anxious to be on the winning side—are said to be trying to ingratiate themselves with the Japanese. On the other hand, the Moslem League, as a whole, has no liking for the Japanese. It may be necessary to take stern measures before it is too late to deal with Indians who are harmful to their country's war efforts."

LIBEL SUIT SETTLED

ENGLISH JOURNAL'S REGRET

A settlement was announced, in the High Court, London, yesterday, in actions for libel brought by the proprietors of the Standard, Dublin, and its editor, Mr. Peter O'Curry, against Associated Newspapers, Ltd., proprietors of the Daily Mail.

Mr. F. Gahan, for the plaintiffs, said that an article, which was by an American journalist, stated that the Catholic Standard was pro-Axis in its editorial policy; that it was fed with Axis propaganda, and that it was the organ of a group that would rather see Germany win the war than England.

When complaint was made to the defendants they recognised that their contributor—who had spent only a short time in Eire—was mistaken, and they were now satisfied that the allegations complained of were unfounded. They had undertaken to pay to each of the plaintiffs an agreed sum for damages and costs, and had expressed their regret for their error in publishing the allegations.

Mr Beecroft, for the Daily Mail, said Mr. Gahan had correctly stated the position, and Mr. Justice Atkinson made the required order.

IRELAND'S POST-WAR PROGRAMME

BUILDING-UP OF INDUSTRY AND AGRICULTURE

THE consideration of the estimate for the Department of the Taoiseach, which was debated in the Dail yesterday, afforded Mr. de Valera an opportunity of making a statement on the economic situation.

Speaking of the Government's programme for the post-war period, he said that it would mean the building up of their industries side by side with their agriculture—a policy that he believed was fundamentally and economically sound.

As time went on, and their industries developed, they would be able to get a better balance between people living on the land and those living in the towns.

AGRICULTURAL POLICY

Mr. J. M. DILLON (Ind., Monaghan), at the outset, said that there would not be in half the shops in rural Ireland a single pound of bacon after the war because the Government had promoted wheat-growing to the exclusion of other cereals. The correct policy was to enforce the sowing of a certain percentage of land in wheat and fix the price at 50s. a barrel, and allow other cereals to be grown for feeding live-stock. Butter for export was as dead as Queen Anne, and the dairy industry should investigate the possibility of increasing milk production and the development of casein production.

Mr. McGILLIGAN said that all the talk about self-sufficiency was only used to bolster up a politically biased economic system, which had broken down since the war started. The Minister for Agriculture and the Minister for Local Government had told them that their two mainstays—the dairying industry and the live-stock trade—were gone. The Minister for Industry and Commerce had told them that the Government was carefully considering the question of post-war planning. In 1938 the then Minister for Industry and Commerce had said that work had to be suspended so that plans could be made for an emergency which would arise in the event of the outbreak of war. If the Minister would take one commodity and tell the House what efforts he had made acquiring it after war broke out he would get rid of some of the ridicule which was being poured upon him by the people.

MR. DE VALERA

Replying to the debate, Mr. DE VALERA said that the head of the Government for the time being had to bear the responsibility for faults in the Government. He took full responsibility for every Minister, and was glad to stand behind the work of the Ministers for Agriculture and Supplies. The Government, on the whole, was composed of young men. Both these Ministers were young, active, hard-working men, and if he had the pick of the House he could not find a better person for the position than the Minister for Supplies. A scandalous underground campaign had been carried on against the Minister for some months. He believed that there was not a single person in the House who could substitute this Minister in his work. These attacks were unfair, and he believed that a person making them could not improve the position.

This year 585,000 acres of wheat were sown—the greatest amount since 1848. They might have to compel wheat-growing if the situation worsened. The programme of building up their industries side by side with their agriculture was, in the main, the programme which he would offer to the people of the country for the post-war period. He believed that the policy was fundamentally and economically sound, and the fact that they had worked towards its realisation, and were continuing to do so, was an answer to those who suggested that there was no planning for the post-war period. As time went on, he believed, and their industries developed, they would be able to get a better balance between the people living on the land and those living in the towns. They had to have exports to pay for their imports, and in the past they had had to subsidise butter to the extent of £1,000,000 over a period of eight or ten years, and in the future they would have to work on the same broad general principle.

ENDS IN VIEW

There had been a definite national economic policy, and after the war the fundamental policy must be to try and produce from their own lands the requirements of their own people. The home market was always a safe market. They must continue to do that, and in regard to the exportable surplus it would depend largely on the conditions of the outside markets. The Department of Agriculture had been given the definite job of taking stock and watching the trends, and being ready to operate a policy in general such as he had indicated, and work in the details when the time came. He wanted to disabuse anybody of the idea that they had no definite ends in view as to where they were going. They always had an end in view, and had tried to work towards that end, and the results showed that a great deal had been accomplished.

They had tried from the beginning to develop their own resources of fuel, even before this war began. He was willing, however, to admit that the progress in peat development was not as satisfactory as they would wish. There was nobody who would not agree that at the present time this country would be much better off if there had been greater progress in that direction. As it was, the only place where there was any real hardship in the matter of fuel was Dublin. Two-thirds of the country was using turf. The big difficulty about turf was that it was relatively bulky—much more so than coal—and was not readily adaptable for transportation. They would have to try and get peat in a much more concentrated form in which the transport costs would be much less than at present. He believed it was possible not merely to get what they aimed at, but, better still, to turn it into electricity for heating and power. Already plans were made for the establishment of the necessary plant on the bogs. It might actually be possible to have gas manufactured on the bogs and piped from there, and that aspect of the matter was being examined.

PAPER INDUSTRY

He regretted that they had not a paper industry, for it was a thing they could have developed. He hoped that the policy of afforestation will be pursued, so that the coming generation would not be in the same position in this respect. There was no reason also why they could not get timber for building purposes. Power and fuel were fundamental and could be met to a large extent from their own fuel resources. A Scientific Research Bureau should be a permanent thing in the State.

With regard to bacon, it might be a good policy not to export bacon at all, but only produce sufficient from their own materials for their own use. He wanted deputies to realise that we are pursuing the main elements of an economic policy, but people might complain that they had not gone as far as they ought to have gone.

Mr. DILLON—You have done quite enough damage already.

Mr. DE VALERA—Is it damage to grow wheat and beet and to utilise our peat resources to the extent we are doing?

Proceeding, he said that they ought to be able to feed and clothe and house themselves from their own resources. There were many houses available now which were not there ten years ago. Their own wool, he thought, could be used to a far greater extent in the manufacture of Irish clothing. Fuel was a problem, and he was much concerned about the prospects for the coming winter.

THE CROPS

Beet and potato acreages were down compared with last year. The present acreage of wheat was 584,000, an increase of 26.2 per cent.; oats 881,400 acres, an increase of 12.7 per cent.; barley 180,600 acres, an increase of 14 per cent.; beans and rye crops were 5,500 acres, an increase of 20 per cent. It should be much more. The total acreage of cereals was 1,657,700—an increase of 17.3 per cent. This was not enough, and was short of the two millions which he had previously suggested. In root crops there was a reduction. In the case of potatoes, the acreage was 424,300—a decrease of .9 per cent.; turnips, 144,300 acres—a decrease of 8.1 per cent.; mangolds, 83,000 acres—a decrease of 13.4 per cent.; beet, 54,800—a decrease of 17 per cent.

The total under root crops was 749,100 acres—a decrease of 6.2 per cent. In cereals, they were in sight of the goal. The total of root crops and cereals was 2,400,000 acres, but the figure required was 2,800,000 under tillage. They could make up the food shortage themselves, and no "bargaining" was necessary. They should give a reasonable price, which should be reflected in the price the consumer was called upon to pay. There was no need for food rationing if the people set out to supply the food which they could produce, and he asked for the co-operation of all in this aim, irrespective of politics.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS

We were getting many things in return for our exports. The British programme did not altogether fit in with ours, and they could not be convinced that our costs of production were higher than in countries where they were buying similar goods. The Government had been criticised for not forcing the situation. That was no use unless they were going to go the whole way, and he did not know if that would be wise at the moment. As primary producers, they always got the worst of it, and the sooner they mended that position the better.

The population of the country had been halved eighty years ago. That had happened to no other country. They ought to have no food problem. Shortage was their own fault. They had so far got on all right by persuasion and co-operation. He hoped that compulsion would not be necessary. The fuel situation in Dublin was serious. People who could help them had set out to do the opposite. The fact that tariffs had been removed was not to be taken as a change in the general policy of protection. Protection was necessary to industrial development.

LIVING AT HOME

The danger that threatened the country would not decrease, and there could be no let-up in matters of defence. The Government was not inducing people to emigrate, but they could not put up a barrier. If a man's job went they could not say to him, "you must live on what we can pay you and stay here." They could not say that families would not get their share of goods because they would be bought with money from England. If they did, then they would have to say the same to the farmer who exported cattle, and so on down the scale. They could not give to a man for work in which he was unskilled the same wages as for work in which he was skilled.

He would do anything in his power to make it possible for men to live at home. It was not a matter of satisfaction to the Government to see men going away. He would welcome anything tending to a solution; but he could not see a solution without a complete change in their social system. Conscription of labour would lead to many other complications. There were difficulties which no amount of planning would solve, and they should strive to make them easier by co-operation.

The motion to refer back was defeated, and the estimate was passed.

The Dail adjourned until 3 p.m. to-day.

CEMENT SALE RESTRICTION

The Minister for Industry and Commerce has made an Emergency Powers Order, the effect of which is to prohibit the sale or disposal of cement by persons engaged in the manufacture of cement otherwise than in accordance with the directions of the Minister.

THE NORTHERN PREMIER

These Goods are Rationed

Boots and Shoes

Footwear of every description is rationed as from to-day. The Minister for Supplies announces in an advertisement to-day that under the clothes rationing scheme certain indicated coupons may be used in connection with the purchase of footwear.

Two coupons are required for men's and women's boots, bootees and shoes, and one coupon for children's sizes.

Stocks of footwear, it is explained, are adequate to meet normal requirements, and the primary object of introducing rationing is to restrict purchases by persons normally resident outside the State.

From 10th August no trader may obtain footwear from, and no trader may supply to, another trader for sale by retail save on surrender of the appropriate number of coupons. This condition will apply to transactions by way of wholesale as from 10th September.

On Saturday, June 13th last, following a rush of buying, the Department of Supplies in a statement said:—"It is not intended to ration leather footwear, as supplies are ample to meet current requirements."

ST. SWITHIN

St. Swithin must have had one eye on the crops this year.

Yesterday, the Day of St. Swithin, saw more mackintoshes, capes, pull-ups and umbrellas than Dublin has shown for many months.

They will be in constant use for the next forty days to come—perhaps!

PAWNBROKERS' STRIKE

UNSETTLED AFTER 9 MONTHS

When will Dublin's pawnbrokers' strike be brought to an end? Now approaching its tenth month—it began in all houses but one, on September 27th, 1941—and affecting managers, assistants, employers and most of the working class and unemployed of the city, it would appear to have reached a complete stalemate.

The present position is that the 25 pawnbroking houses in the city are doing only one-third of their previous business; 130 men are on strike pay; three out of the number originally affected have gone to England, and one to Northern Ireland; two have returned to work; the pawnbrokers' shops are being kept open because the employers' families are staffing them, helped by 20 non-union men.

The latest news is that an offer of a 10 per cent. increase to all men with salaries less than £4 a week (temporaries excluded) has been turned down by the men's union, which states that it cannot accept any offer which does not cover all the men, and leaves unsettled the question of non-union labour taken on since the commencement of the strike.

Speaking about this offer to the Irish Times yesterday, Mr. Kilbride, Chairman of the Irish Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Protection Association, said that the offer had been made last week by the Association through the Department of Industry and Commerce, and that the only employés excluded were the managers. None of the strikers, he added, had gone back to work.

Commenting on this statement, Mr. W. H. Beirne, General Secretary of the Irish National Union of Vintners, Grocers, and Allied Trades' Assistants, said that the offer had excluded not only managers, but "seconds-in-charge," temporary assistants, and 30 per cent. of the men on strike.

SPITFIRES OVER FRANCE

Four offensive operations, ranging over a 200-mile front, from the Cherbourg peninsula to Etaples, were carried out by Fighter Command early yesterday evening, states the British Air Ministry News Service. "Nearly 200 Spitfires were involved in a low-level attack, which was a two-pronged operation—one prong in the Etaples area and the other over Fecamp-St. Valerie-en-Caux, Dieppe.

LABOUR ASSAILS GOVERNMENT

SUPPLIES PROBLEM

UNLESS the Government face up to the problem of seeing that the working classes are secured a sufficiency of essentials of life to maintain themselves and their families during the coming winter, the sufferings of our people will be intensified, and the responsibility for their position must be accepted by the Government, which has shown "a callous disregard for the sufferings of the poor," said Mr. Michael Colgan, in his presidential address to the Irish Trades Union Congress, which opened its forty-eighth annual assembly at Bundoran yesterday.

In this part of Ireland, misnamed Eire, while they had escaped the physical effects of the war, its economic effects had been felt to marked degree. While the richer section could get tpractically anything they wanted, and the Government was, apparently, reluctant to control ever-soaring prices of essentials, the poor were left to shiver and starve in the slums of Dublin, Cork and other cities during last winter.

Referring to the putting into operation of the Trades Union Act on the 1st May last, he said they must regret that the Government in this time of stress and emergency should have seen fit to impose this class legislation when there were more pressing problems to be attended to. The Federation of Irish Manufacturers—that combination of pure-souled patriots, whose patriotism had shown such a good financial return—publicly boasted that it was at its behest the Government had introduced and passed the Act. Flushed with victory, its members were now calling out for more repressive legislation against the trade union movement.

TRIBUTE TO MINISTER

Many of the objectionable features in the E.S.B.'s Pensions Bill had been removed by the Minister for Industry and Commerce as a result of representations made to him by the National Executive. The President also expressed appreciation of the courtesy and consideration shown to the National Executive by Mr. Lemass, whom they found willing and helpful on all occasions they met him.

The annual report set out the refusal of the National Executive to accept the affiliation of a number of unions, including the Workers' Union of Ireland. The grounds for decision in the last named case being "because its record as a cause of disruptive action within the trade union would make its admission a disintegrating instead of a harmonious element."

Mr. Jim Larkin protested against this statement, and said that neither he nor any member of his Union had ever levelled unfair criticism against the Congress.

A PROTEST

Mr. O'Connor (National Union Seamen, Belfast) said that if it were not for the work found for Irishmen and women in England and Northern Ireland the people of the twenty six counties would be starving.

There were cries from many delegates of "Order, order," and "Put him out."

The Chairman said the delegate could not pursue this line. It had no relation to the motion.

The resolution was passed.

A resolution was passed calling for the repeal of the Trade Union Act.

The Congress adjourned until to-day.

SITE FOR ABATTOIR

The City Architect has reported to the General Purposes Committee of the Dublin Corporation that the East Wall site was not suitable for the proposed new abattoir. He recommended the Blackhorse Avenue site of 68½ acres at a cost of £30,000. The East Wall site consists of 50 acres at an estimated cost of £75,000.

Christopher Joseph Hudson (27), of Tara street, Dublin, was sentenced, at Birmingham Assizes, yesterday, to five years' penal servitude for having attempted to murder Lydia Tongue, an A.T.S. girl, of Deanery road, Wolverhampton, and for attempted suicide.

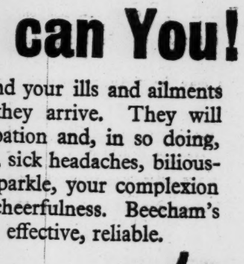
& FLATULENCE AFTER MEALS

The reason why you get that burning pain and distressing wind after meals is because your stomach is always too acid. It sours everything you eat. Food simply can't digest and your stomach is tortured in the attempt.

Why endure this mealtime misery when 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets will stop it this very day? They relieve acidity and sweeten a sour stomach at once. The stomach starts digesting your food right away and finishes its work with perfect ease. You feel nothing—no heartburn, no flatulence, not a twinge of your old stomach pain.

If you suffer from acute attacks of gastric pain 'Milk of Magnesia' Tablets will stop them in five minutes. Try them to-day!



'Milk of Magnesia' is the trade mark of Phillips' preparation of Magnesia.

Neat flat boxes for the pocket, 6d. and 1/-. Also family sizes, 2/- and 3/6 everywhere.

Crumlin's New Church Opened

THE new church of St. Mary's, Crumlin, was consecrated yesterday by the Archbishop of Dublin (the Most Rev. A. W. Barton, D.D.). The sermon was preached by the Most Rev. Dr. Gregg, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of All Ireland.

There was a large attendance, and many parishioners failed to gain admission. The Archbishops, attended by their chaplains, were received at the west door by the Incumbent, the Rev. Walter J. M. Burrows, M.A.; clergy and churchwardens, and members of the Select Vestry.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies at the west door, when the Archbishop sought admission by knocking with his crozier three times, the Archbishop and the clergy, headed by the churchwardens, Messrs. H. Faithful and B. C. O'Toole, and the choir, proceeded to the nave, singing the 24th Psalm. The instrument of conveyance was then presented to the Archbishop, and, after the Act of Consecration had been read by the Registrar, the anthem, "O, how amiable are Thy dwellings" (Richardson), was sung by the choir, followed by the hymn, "Here, O my Lord, I see Thee face to face."

PRIMATE'S ADDRESS

Delivering the first sermon in the new church, the Primate said that when he came to Dublin, in 1920, Crumlin was a declining parish, and had later been united to Rathfarnham parish, and was so worked by the present Archdeacon of Dublin (Very Rev. E. G. Sullivan). Then began a strange and encouraging story. As Dublin housing expanded on the South side of the city, inhabitants came pouring in, and it was not long before he had been warned that church and schools were being swamped by a population which had outgrown anything that they could do for it.

So, in 1937, Crumlin was set free once more, to start on its course as an independent parish, and he was able to license the Rev. W. J. M. Burrows as Curate-in-charge. With the help and good-will of various persons and bodies, that beautiful church had been erected. He congratulated the Archbishop of Dublin, the diocese and people of the parish on the completion of the work, despite the difficulties of the times.

THE LATE LT.-COL. G. M. GROGAN

The passing of Lieut.-Colonel George Meredyth Grogan, D.S.O., of Plattenstown, Arklow, Co. Wicklow, was marked by a simple ceremony on Tuesday last in the presentatives of his old unit, the 18th Royal Irish Regiment.

Messrs. T. Croke and W. Harris, representing the Old Comrades' Association, travelled from Dublin to Inch, where they laid a wreath of poppies intermingled with the Royal Irish colours on Lieut.-Colonel Grogan's grave. The delegates were met at the cemetery by the Rev. F. R. Rains-forth, Rector of Inch. They afterwards visited Plattenstown and conveyed to Mrs. Grogan sincere sympathy from old comrades of her husband.

Among letters of condolence received were those from the following members of the regiment:—Major-General and Mrs. Beauchamp Doran, the Earl of Granard, Lieut.-Colonel Alex. R. Gordon, D.S.O., M.P.; Lieut.-Colonel Evan C. Lloyd, D.S.O.; Lieut.-Colonel Vandeleur, D.S.O.; Major J. J. Tynan, and Lieut. Dundas. Miss Reger, Hon. Secretary and Treasurer of the Irish Association, also sent condolences.

The Archbishop of Dublin (Most Rev. Dr. Barton), Rev. Canon Tobias and Rev. Canon Drury, leading the procession when the new church of St. Mary's, Crumlin, was consecrated yesterday.

Killarney Programme

FIELDS, probably, will be of better size at Killarney to-day than at the opening stage, although among the declared runners are several that ran yesterday. At all events, there should be a better contest for the Rank Cup than was the case for the Windsor Lad Cup. Capital Star, winner of the latter event, has earned a penalty, and may give way to his stablemate, Pantry. Crafty Prince appears to have enough to do with 13st., and, perhaps, the winner will be found in Sarawaki, who looks nicely treated. Selections:—

Mountain Hurdle—Sergeant Dunne.
Bunrower Hurdle—Kilfeakle.
Glena Plate—Artist's Island.
Muckross Chase—Kilfeakle.
Rank Cup—Sarawaki.
Mangerton Handicap—Mikado.
Visitors' Plate—Housewarmer.

MR. ALLNATT BUYS BIG STUD

An offer by Mr. A. E. Allnatt to buy all Lord Glanely's horses, numbering 134, has been accepted, but the price has not been divulged. Mr. Allnatt, in the summer of 1940, bought 11 yearling colts from the Aga Khan for 4,400 guineas. Mr. Allnatt is a building contractor, and most of his horses are trained by Lawson at Manton.

Mr. C. G. Gibson, Lord Glanely's nephew, has registered the late Peer's racing colours, but he is unlikely to run any horses until after the war.

DEATH OF SCOTTISH RUGBY PLAYER

News has reached Edinburgh of the death in India, from enteric fever, of Captain James M. Ritchie, former Scottish Rugby football and water polo international. He was capped as a Rugby forward in six successive matches in 1933 and 1934.

COMBINED SERVICES SWIMMING GALA

The annual combined services' gala was held at Blackrock last night. Many of the high officials of all the services were present, Mr. Traynor, Minister for Defence, presented the prizes. D. Page retained his title in the Civil Service club championship and D. O'Neill (Army) won the youths' championship of Leinster. The inter-services' squadron championship for the McDunphy Cup was won by the Army team.

100 Yards Youths' Championship of Leinster—D. O'Neill (Army), 1; G. Brady (Blackrock College S.C.), 2; S. Coffins (Blackrock College), 3. Eight competed. Time—57 secs. Won by a touch 2 yards.

Inter-Services' Squadron Championship—Army (Lt. J. Coffey, Lt. P. Slattery, Lt. H. O'Neill, Pte. D. O'Neill), 1; Marine Services, 2; Civil Service, 3. Four teams competed. 2 mins. 30 secs.

IRISH UNIVERSITIES' CHAMPIONSHIP

The annual Irish universities' swimming championship gala will take place to-morrow at Blackrock Baths at 7 p.m. The programme should be one of the best of the year, with such notable swimmers as E. McCartney (Queen's), Irish and Ulster champion and record holder for almost all free-style distances; W. J. Lowry (Queen's), Irish 100 yards free-style record holder and back-stroke champion; F. G. Gowdy (Queen's), Irish breast-stroke champion; A. Schulhoff (University College, Dublin), third in the Irish breast-stroke championship; W. Ashmore (Dublin University), former Irish record and championship holder.

Besides the inter-varsity championships, there will be a novel squadron race between all the Leinster clubs each team being composed of ten men. This is the first time that a race of this type has been held at Blackrock, and the success with which it met when tried out indoors by U.C.D. last year would indicate that it will become a popular annual event. Eddie Heron, the Irish and Leinster high board and spring board diving champion, will give an exhibition.

Yesterday U.C.D. beat Dublin University 2-1 at water polo. M. Feddes got both goals for U.C.D., and W. Ashmore's scored for Trinity. High-board diving—P. Feddes (U.C.D.), 87.6 points, 1; R. McCall (Dublin University), 81.2 points, 2; J. Sweetman (Dublin University), 70.8 points, 3. Three competed.

DAIL QUESTIONS

IRISH SEAMEN IN LISBON

An allegation of neglect of duty by the Irish Chargé d'Affaires in Lisbon, which, Mr. de Valera said, was contained in a question asked in the Dail yesterday by Dr. J. Hannigan (Lab.), was denied by the Taoiseach in his reply.

The question related to the arrest of five Irish seamen last January. Mr. DE VALERA said there was no case for a claim for compensation. The men had been imprisoned, tried and acquitted. The Chargé d'Affaires did not take up duty until February 6, and shortly afterwards the men were given improved conditions. This followed an application by the employers, made on the advice of the Chargé d'Affaires. The latter had visited the Portuguese Foreign Ministry on six occ

Supplies

In Dáil Eireann yesterday the Taoiseach gave deputies a short review of the country's economic position; and it must be admitted that the picture which he drew was not particularly attractive. Mr. de Valera continues to believe in the old Sinn Fein doctrine of "Ourselves Alone." It is evident that he still has a hankering after what the late Kevin O'Higgins once described as "the hair-shirt Republic," but ten years of responsible office have taught him a certain amount, and he realises now that government is a science in which idealism must be tempered occasionally by common-sense. The war has cut Ireland off from most of her normal sources of supply. Mr. de Valera's Government has adopted a policy of political neutrality, with the inevitable result that our producers no longer can rely upon the British market for the disposal of their surplus, and, for most practical purposes, Ireland either must feed, clothe, house and heat her people from her own resources or suffer the unhappy consequences. In justice to the Government it must be stated that sincere efforts have been made to solve the manifold problems of supplies. They have not all been successful, and there can be no doubt, as the Taoiseach admitted, that Ireland's prospects for the coming winter are decidedly bleak. The problem has two main aspects—food and fuel. In regard to the former, 585,000 acres of wheat are under cultivation this year—a greater area than has been under cultivation for nearly a hundred years. While the wheat crop has increased, there has been a fall in root crops—even in potatoes. Turnips and mangolds are down, and there has been a drop of 17 per cent. in the cultivation of sugar beet. Altogether, according to Mr. de Valera's figures, the total acreage under tillage this year is 2,400,000, whereas the immediate ideal is 2,800,000; and the spanning of this gap will not be easy. In regard to fuel, the situation is no better than it was three months ago. In our opinion, it probably will become considerably worse before the end of the year. The Taoiseach declares that it is only in Dublin that the domestic problem is really acute. Two-thirds of the country are using turf; but Dublin contains about one-sixth of the total population, and, in the nature of things, the city dweller depends entirely for his heating on what fuel he can buy, whereas the countryman always can make shift with local timber. In the course of time, no doubt, our native bogs will be developed to such an extent that Ireland will become independent of imported coal; but that will take time, and the people's need is immediate.

We are glad to note that Mr. de Valera has become a convert to the ideas of the late Sir John Griffith, who was a pioneer of turf development in this country, and always held that the turf ought to be burned where it is born—namely, on the bogs. The Taoiseach now envisages a time when turf will be used not only for the production of electric current, but also for the generation of gas, which will be piped from the bogs; but, in the meantime, what is to happen next winter to the people of the Dublin slums? The truth is that the supply situation is exceedingly grave. Only a month ago Mr. Sean Lemass stated officially that the Government had no intention to ration footwear, on the general ground that there were ample stocks of leather in the country; yet we announce this morning that a rationing scheme is to be put into immediate operation, in order, ostensibly, to prevent the purchase of boots and shoes by visitors from the other side of the border. We have no objection to the rationing of footwear. On the contrary, we have held from the beginning that the only proper approach to the solution of the supply problem in this country is to introduce a scheme of general rationing, similar to that which has been introduced in Great Britain. Mr. Lemass's change of front, however, suggests muddled thinking, and, coming on the heels of the drapery business, it does not tend to increase confidence in the Government's efficiency. The whole position at the moment is confused. Bacon is short, and probably will be shorter. Eggs are becoming scarce, and the lack of a proper system of distribution is causing decided hardships in particular areas. There seems to be no excuse for the decline in sugar beet production at a time when an increase was urgently needed; and if is quite possible now that even cement will cease to be available for any but Government purposes in consequence of the stoppage of coal imports. In these circumstances, the people of Eire must resign themselves to the fact that they will be on short commons at least for the duration of the war. Every citizen can help to make matters better by the practice of domestic economy; but a heavy responsibility rests upon the Government, which has allowed the present situation to develop, and, while we welcome Mr. de Valera's promise of a scheme of post-war planning, we would suggest, with all due respect, that it is the inch nearest to the saw that counts, and that, unless steps are taken to secure a more equitable distribution of our available supplies, the Irish people will be faced with a disastrous winter.

A Second Front

Barely a month ago everybody in Great Britain was raising the cry for a "second front" in continental Europe. It was encouraged by Mr. Anthony Eden's account of the Anglo-Russian Treaty, in the course of which he gave a clear hint that a second front was being contemplated, Then Field-Marshal Rommel began his spectacular advance towards Egypt, and the cry dwindled and disappeared. The people of England were driven to realise that they were fighting already on a very dangerous front, the fortunes of which might make all the difference to the issue of the war; they dropped the demand for a new theatre of hostilities on the Continent, and raised, instead, a call for stronger and more positive action in the Middle East. Other countries, however, have not forgotten the second front. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of the present week this newspaper carried reports of demands from various quarters of the world, all of which exhorted the British and American Governments to do something to relieve the German pressure upon Russia. An Australian newspaper, the Sydney Morning Herald, argues that the second front must be opened while Russia is still strong enough to resist the German thrust: afterwards, it will be too late. Ilya Ehrenberg, a well-known Soviet writer, insists that the second front is "in the making" in the Rhineland—which may be an "inspired" statement, or may be nothing more than what is called wishful thinking. The English-language newspaper published in Moscow asks that all the Allied effort shall be concentrated upon a blow at Germany's rear, while M. Alexandrov, a member of the Central Committee of the Communist Party, extends an open challenge to Britain and America, demanding the establishment of a second front this year. From New York comes the news that the Congress of Industrial Organisations, probably the most powerful workers' group in the whole country, has begun the distribution of half a million postcards, which will inform President Roosevelt that a second front is needed "without further delay." None of these protestations may be sufficient in itself to move the powers responsible, but their cumulative effect cannot be negligible. The Russian demands are the most important. Russia, by all appearances, is firmly assured that the British propose to attack the Continent at the earliest possible moment, and is fighting in confidence that an invaluable distraction will come. Can the other Allies afford to disappoint this hope?

It is easier, of course, to talk about a second front than to bring it into being. Most people, when asked what they mean by a second front, would speak vaguely of a landing of some tens, or even hundreds, of thousands of British and American troops on the Continent, with the object, first, of establishing themselves, and then of thrusting with all possible speed towards the heart of Germany. The difficulties of such a venture would be formidable. Soldiers are not Channel swimmers. They would have to be transported across the Channel in ships, together with all the enormous mass of munitions and stores that a modern army requires; and the ships simply are not there. It might be more practicable to harass the "Axis" by an intensification of the "commando" raids which were so striking a feature of British operations during the winter and spring; but would these raids, however frequent and intense, be sufficient to distract German attention in any serious degree from the Russian front? We do not know what form of second front is in the Russian mind, or was in Mr. Eden's mind when he made his celebrated pronouncement. One is at liberty to suspect, however, that something larger than "commando" operations is contemplated, and will be attempted before many months have passed. Everything must depend upon events in different parts of the world. If Field-Marshal Rommel, regaining the initiative, can offer a really dangerous threat to the Middle East, Britain may find her hands too full for any experimentation with new theatres of war.

OBITUARY

JUDGE WAKELY

The death occurred yesterday, at "The Birches," Redditch, Worcester, of Judge Wakely, formerly Circuit Court Judge of the Counties Roscommon, Sligo, and the Midlands.

Born in 1861, he was the eldest son of the late Mr. John Wakely, D.L., and Mary Catherine, daughter of the Rev. Richard George, of Kentstown, Meath. He married, in 1888, Raby Low Montserrat, daughter of the Rev. Morgan Woodard Jellett, Canon of Christ Church Cathedral and Rector of St. Peter's Church, Dublin. He was educated at Kingstown School and Trinity College, Dublin, where he obtained his M.A. degree. He was called to the Irish Bar in 1888, and became a Q.C. in 1899. He was a Bencher of the King's Inns, Dublin, in 1902. He was Lord of the Manor of Baltyburly. His publications include "The Irish Land Law and Land Purchase Acts," and articles dealing with the Land Purchase (Ireland) Act, 1903.

NEW STAINED GLASS

The stained glass windows executed for the Holy Ghost Novitiate, Kimmage, for Rockwell College and for Bandon Catholic Church at the Harry Clarke Studios, where they are now on view, have remarkable splendour of colour and breadth of design. In some passages—as, for instance, in the curiously contrasted, yet beautifully harmonious reds and blues of the cape worn by St. Luke and the varied ivories of the back of the throne on which the Madonna is seated in the Kimmage window—there is marked evidence of research into the problems of light and colour that were everywhere so amazingly solved by the French mediæval masters, and that in these incidental passages here are scarcely less skilfully solved by contemporary Irish artists.

In the conception of the works as a whole, however, it may be suggested that too much is still conceded to the pictorial. Charming as it is the Bandon window is as much in the tradition of Florentine painting as of French stained glass; and in the matter of characterisation there is no markedly personal break with convention. The four evangelists in the Kimmage windows resemble each other too closely, and the Madonna is hardly the overwhelming presence that the great men of the past would have made her. It is of urgent importance that patrons of our extraordinarily gifted Irish stained glass artists should not only leave them free, but should give them every encouragement to make a clear and final break with the almost characterless prettiness of the nineteenth century stained glass manufacturers—they were hardly artists—of Munich and Birmingham.

WEDDING

CRONIN—GILMARTIN: The wedding of Mr. Gerald Cronin, son of Mr. Thomas F. Cronin and the late Mrs. Cronin, Claremont, Ballybunion, and Miss Mauteen Gilmartin, daughter of the late Mr. James Gilmartin, Ballymote, Co. Sligo, and Mrs. Gilmartin, Kincora, Zion road, Rathgar, Dublin, took place yesterday at St. Joseph's, Terenure. The Rev. L. Kelly, who officiated, was assisted by the Rev. J. C. Canavan, S.J., and the Rev. M. Maiben, C.S.Sp. The bride was given away by her brother, Dr. F. J. Gilmartin, and was attended by one bridesmaid, Miss Kitty O'Donovan. Mr. Jack Cronin was best man, and the ushers in the church were Messrs James Gilmartin and B. Maiben. After a reception held at the Shelbourne Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Cronin left for the West of Ireland.

CASTLEKNOCK UNION

The annual general meeting of the Castleknock College Union was held at the Dolphin Hotel, Mr. J. V. Downes, B.Arch., president in the chair. Having reviewed the work of the past year, the president said that the Union could be congratulated on maintaining its high standard of success. Particular reference was made to St. Columcille's Boys' Club run by members of the Union and to the successful inauguration of a Discussion Circle. Mr. Percy Higgins was elected president of the Union for the ensuing year.
